

Taskforce on Federal Consumer Financial Law Overview

Roundtable Discussion

March 2020

Taskforce Background

The taskforce is in part inspired by an earlier commission established by the Consumer Credit Protection Act (Act) in 1968. In addition to various changes to consumer law generally, the Act established the National Commission on Consumer Finance to conduct original research and provide Congress with recommendations relating to the regulation of consumer credit. The commission's report contains original empirical data, information, and analyses—all of which undergird the report's final recommendations. The data, findings, and recommendations from the commission were all made public and the report led to significant legislative and regulatory developments in consumer finance.

Taskforce Objectives and Scope

The Taskforce will (1) examine the existing legal and regulatory environment facing consumers and financial services providers; and (2) report its recommendations for ways to improve and strengthen consumer financial laws and regulations, including recommendations for resolving conflicting requirements or inconsistencies, reducing unwarranted regulatory burdens in light of market or technological developments, improving consumer understanding of markets and products, and identifying gaps in knowledge that should be addressed through future Bureau research.

Conversation Prompts

- What trends in financial technology or FinTech could impact the marketplace ten to fifteen years from now? What might be the impact for consumers as the market evolves?
- What regulatory issues should be addressed at the federal-level to promote greater access to consumer financial products or services to underserved individuals and/or communities?
- How might the Bureau promote competition, innovation, and consumer choice in the marketplace, while at the same time furthering its mission of consumer protection?
- In terms of regulatory modernization, where are there gaps in regulations, where are there redundancies, and where is additional clarity needed? Where are there opportunities for improved coordination between federal and state regulators, specifically from the perspective of regulated entities and consumers?
- Are there new areas of research that the Bureau should consider undertaking or expanding on in the consumer financial marketplace?
